

Aiko Tanaka

Aiko was born in Tokyo, Japan and began modelling at the age of 3 and appeared on numerous fashion catalogues and advertisements in Japan. It was after graduating high school when she decided that she wanted to be an actress, which prompted her to move to Boston all by herself. It wasn't long before a talent agent from LA scouted her and Aiko moved to LA to become a dancer on live TV. She secured her first TV gig on the "The Grind" with MTV. Soon after, she was featured as a main dancer for "Soul Train," a popular dance show in which many talents (namely Carmen Electra, Jody Watley, and Rosie Perez) were discovered. She has also appeared in many music videos for Destiny's Child, Afroman, Far*East Movement, Jin, and more. Her film and television credits include: "The Howard Stern Show," "Late Night with Jay Leno," "Malcolm and Eddie," "My Wife and Kids," "Numb3rs," and The Fast & The Furious: Tokyo Drift. You can see her in the upcoming indie film, Finishing the Game. In her recent years, she has been on Fox's Laughs, Stand up and deliver, and doing stand-up comedy.